FOR THE YEAR
1920.

The effective workers for the peace of righteousness were men like Stein, Cavour, and Lincoln; that is, men who dreamed great dreams, but who were also pre-eminently men of action, who stood for the right, and who knew that the right would fail unless might was put behind it.

THOMAS BALL'S EMANCIPATION STATUE.

This statue in Park Square, Boston, the gift of Moses Kimball, was unveiled December 6, 1879, Mayor F. O. Prince delivering the oration. It is a duplicate of the Freedman's Memorial statue in Lincoln Square, Washington.

On the base of the statue is the word:
EMANCIPATION

On the base of the pedestal are these lines:
A RACE SET FREE AND THE COUNTRY AT PEACE
LINCOLN
RESTS FROM HIS LABORS

It was on January 1, 1863, that Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong.

I believe this Government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free.

Slavery is founded in the selfishness of man's nature—opposition to it, in his love of justice.

No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent.

This nation cannot live on injustice. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

In December, 1862, Lincoln referred to the subject of the emancipation as follows: "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion."

LINCOLN'S BIRTHPLACE.

The cabin in which Lincoln was born on Nolin Creek, Hardin County, Kentucky, reconstructed, was dedicated at Hodgenville, Kentucky, on February 12, 1909, the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

My early life is perfectly characterized by a single line of Gray's Elegy: "The short and simple annals of the poor."

The Lord must love the common people—that's why he made so many of them.

I am not ashamed to confess that twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer, mauling rails, at work on a flat boat—just what might happen to any poor man's son.

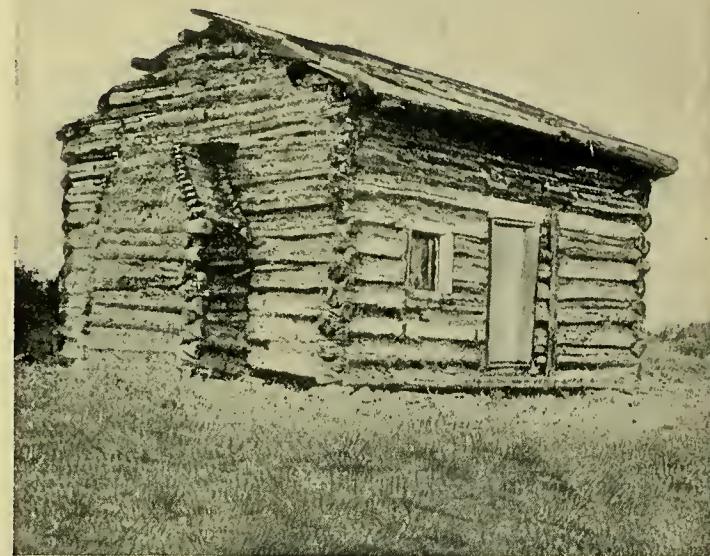

No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty—none less inclined to take, or touch, aught which they have not honestly earned.

I have always made it a rule that if people won't turn out for me I will for them. If I didn't there would be a collision.

I am slow to learn, and slow to forget that which I have learned. My mind is like a piece of steel—very hard to scratch anything on it, and almost impossible after you get it there to rub it out.

I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that of all about me seemed insufficient for that day.

THE CAPITOL AT WASHINGTON.

The national Capitol is one of the most imposing and beautiful governmental buildings in the world. The corner stone was laid by President Washington on September 18, 1793. The north wing was completed in 1800, the south wing in 1811. The interior of both was burned by the British on August 24, 1814. The foundation of the main building was laid on March 24, 1818, and the whole was completed in 1827. The corner stone for extensions to the north and south was laid on July 4, 1851, Daniel Webster delivering the oration. They were finished in 1867. The original dome was a low structure of wood covered with copper. It was replaced by the present iron dome, 278 feet high. In the photograph on the opposite page, taken on the morning of Lincoln's first inauguration, the dome appears uncompleted.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world? — From First Inaugural, March 4, 1861.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations. — From Second Inaugural, March 4, 1865.

ASSASSINATION AND DEATH.

At twenty minutes past ten on the evening of April 14, 1865, while attending a performance of "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D. C., Lincoln was shot by J. Wilkes Booth. He was carried across the street to 516 Tenth Street, N. W., where he died on the morning of April 15, at twenty-two minutes past seven. The house is now occupied by the Memorial Association of the District of Columbia and contains a valuable collection of Lincoln relics.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

I am nothing, but truth is everything.

My greatest ambition is to be truly esteemed of my fellowmen by rendering myself worthy of their esteem.

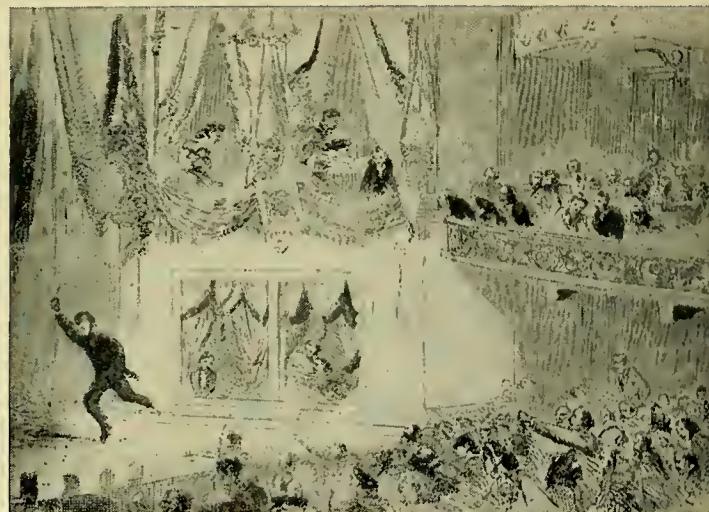

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith, let us, to the end, dare to do our duty, as we understand it.

Two principles have stood face to face from the beginning of time and will ever continue to struggle. The one is the common right of humanity, the other is the divine right of kings.

Let us at all times remember that all American citizens are brothers of a common country, and should dwell together in the bonds of fraternal feeling.

Die when I may, I want it said of me by those who know me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower when I thought a flower would grow.

THE ASSASSINATION AND ESCAPE.

From a picture in Harper's Weekly of April 29, 1865.

After Booth fired the fatal shot, he jumped from the box to the stage eight or nine feet below. The spur on his right heel caught in the flag decorating the box, causing him to fall on one knee. He escaped across the stage, brandishing a knife and shouting, "Sic semper tyrannis!"

NATIONAL LINCOLN MONUMENT.

The National Lincoln Monument at Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield, Illinois, where Lincoln was buried on May 4, 1865, was dedicated October 15, 1874. It is of Quincy granite and 100 feet high from the ground level. The bronze statue represents Lincoln holding with his left hand the Emancipation Proclamation and in his right hand the pen with which it was written. Both monument and statue were designed by Larkin G. Mead, of Vermont.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

Let no one falter who thinks he is right.

When you have an elephant on hand, and he wants to run away, better let him run.

My experience and observation have been that those who promise most do the least.

I shall never be old enough to speak without embarrassment when I have nothing to talk about.

Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet, if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled up by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." — From Second Inaugural, March 4, 1865.

A PERSONAL DESCRIPTION.

The familiar photograph of Lincoln seated at a table upon which are a writing set and a tall hat was taken in 1863 during the darkest days of the Civil War. It strikingly shows Lincoln's physical characteristics — his height of which he was proud, his powerful frame, and his long arms. In 1859 he wrote in a biographical sketch:

"If any personal description of me is thought desirable, it may be said I am in height six feet four inches, nearly; lean in flesh, weighing, on an average, one hundred and eighty pounds; dark complexion, with coarse black hair and gray eyes — no other marks or brands recollected."

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

I don't know anything about money. I never had enough of my own to fret me.

Often a limb must be amputated to save a life; but a life is never wisely given to save a limb.

I sincerely wish war was an easier and pleasanter business than it is, but it does not admit of holidays.

I know that the Lord is always on the side of the right; but it is my constant anxiety and prayer that I and this nation should be on the Lord's side.

It rests me after a hard day's work if I can find some good cause for saving a man's life; and I go to bed happy as I think how joyous the signing of my name will make him and his family and his friends.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

The White House was so called after the home of Martha Washington in Virginia. It is built of freestone painted white, was modeled after the Duke of Leinster's palace at Dublin, and the architect was James Hoban, a native of Dublin. In design it is considered to surpass anything of a similar style in this country. The corner stone was laid in 1792. It was first occupied by President John Adams in 1800. It was partially burned by the British in 1814, was rebuilt, and reoccupied in 1818. The north and south porches were added in 1825. In Jefferson's time the east and west terraces were built. President Lincoln set aside the second story of the east wing for official purposes. The White House was reconstructed in 1902, when Roosevelt was President. The photograph on the opposite page was taken when Lincoln was President.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

I have never had a feeling politically that did not spring from the sentiments embodied in the Declaration of Independence.

My purpose is to be in my action just and constitutional, and yet practical, in performing the important duty with which I am charged of maintaining the unity and the free principles of our common country.

The Constitution will be preserved and defended until it is enforced and obeyed in every part of every one of the United States. It must be so respected, obeyed, and enforced and defended, let the grass grow where it may.

"TAD" IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

Thomas Lincoln, known as "Tad", was nearly eight years old when he went to live in the White House. John Hay, one of the President's secretaries, writes of him as "a merry, warm-blooded, kindly little boy, perfectly lawless, and full of odd fancies and inventions, the 'unchartered libertine' of the Executive Mansion." No place was sacred from Tad, not even receptions and cabinet meetings. The President liked to go through picture books with him. In the evening Tad would report all he had done during the day, and often then would fall asleep lying on the floor beside the desk in his father's office, to be carried off to bed later in his father's arms.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

Nothing valuable can be lost by taking time.

To young men: "You must not wait to be brought forward by the older man."

You can't put a long sword in a short scabbard.

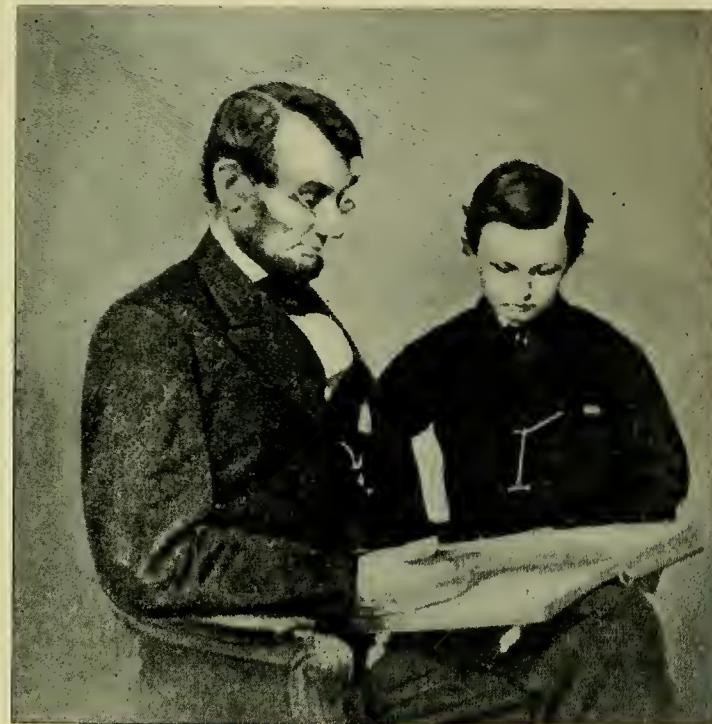

When you can't remove an obstacle, plough around it!

I do not think much of a man who is not wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

Meet face to face and converse together — the best way to efface unpleasant feeling.

I shall try to correct errors when shown to be errors, and I shall adopt new views so fast as they shall appear to be true views.

LINCOLN THE LAWYER.

September 9, 1836, Lincoln was licensed to practice law in Sangamon County, Illinois. He moved from New Salem to Springfield and was admitted to the bar in 1837, at the age of twenty-eight. From September 20, 1843, until his death Lincoln was in partnership with William H. Herndon at Springfield. Herndon, who knew him as intimately as any man did, said of him: "The truth about Mr. Lincoln is that he read less and thought more than any man of his sphere in America."

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

Learn the laws and obey them.

Legislation and adjudication must follow and conform to the progress of society.

In law, it is good policy to never plead what you need not, lest you oblige yourself to prove what you cannot.

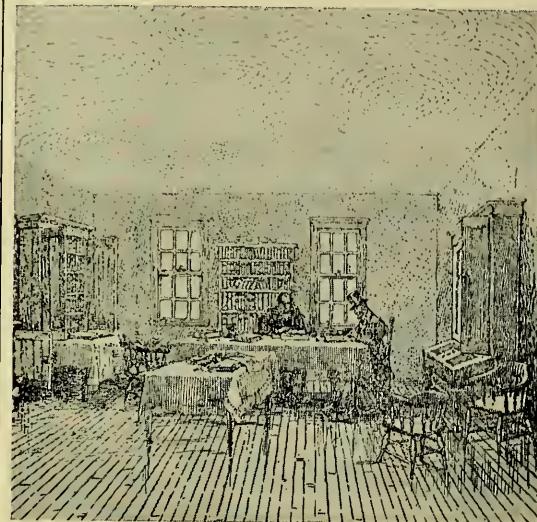

Discourage litigation. Persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can.

Extemporaneous speaking should be practised and cultivated. It is the lawyer's avenue to the public.

As a peacemaker the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will be business enough.

Resolve to be honest at all events; and if, in your own judgment, you cannot be an honest lawyer, resolve to be honest without being a lawyer.

Naney Hanks, the mother of Lincoln, was born in Virginia on February 5, 1784, was married to Thomas Lincoln June 12, 1806, and died at Pigeon Creek, Spenceer County, Indiana, October 5, 1818. The monument over her grave there was "erected by a friend of her martyred son" in 1879, Mr. P. E. Studebaker of South Bend, Indiana. The inscription reads:

NANCY HANKS
LINCOLN
MOTHER OF
ABRAHAM LINCOLN
DIED, OCTOBER 5, 1818. AGE 35 YEARS

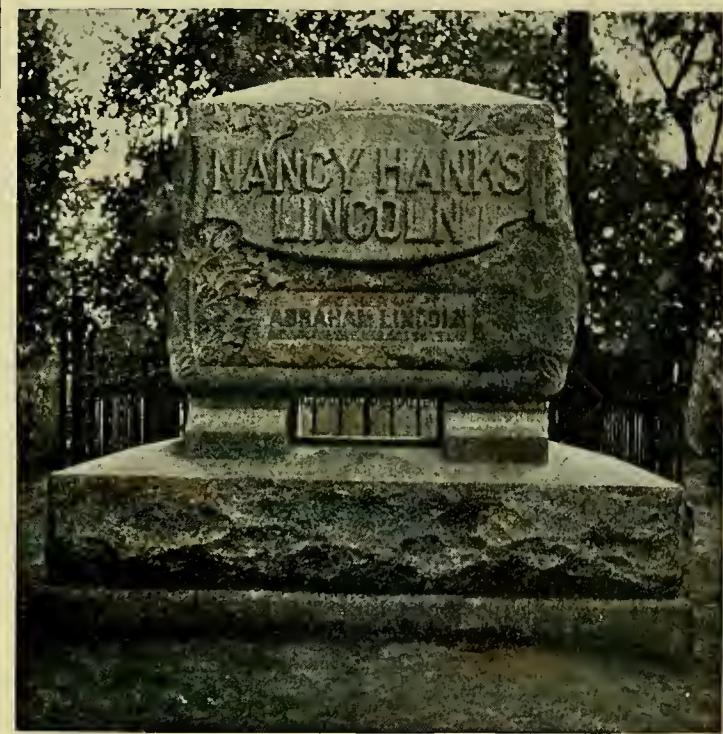

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my mother. If all that has been said in praise of woman were applied to the women of America, it would not do them justice. . . . God bless the women of America!

It has been said of the world's history hitherto that "might makes right"; it is for us and for our times to reverse the maxim, and to show that right makes might.

But for those prayers I should have faltered and perhaps failed long ago. Tell every father and mother you know to keep on praying and I will keep on fighting, for I am sure that God is on our side.

LINCOLN'S WIFE AND FAMILY.

On November 4, 1842, Lincoln was married to Miss Mary Todd of Lexington, Kentucky. Miss Todd was born on December 13, 1818, and from girlhood had a supreme desire to become mistress of the White House, but its realization did not seem a probability at the time of her wedding. They had four children:

Robert Todd Lincoln, born on August 1, 1843, now resides in Chicago.

Edward Baker Lincoln, born on March 10, 1846, died in infancy.

William Wallace Lincoln, born on December 21, 1850, died in the White House on February 20, 1862.

Thomas Lincoln, born on April 4, 1853, died in Chicago on July 15, 1871.

Mrs. Lincoln died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ninian W. Edwards, in Springfield, Illinois, on July 16, 1882, and was interred in the Lincoln Monument vault in that city.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

Get books and read and study them carefully.

This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it.

The power of hope upon human exertion and happiness is wonderful.

Rise up to the height of a generation of free men worthy of a free government.

THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL.

The Lincoln Memorial at Washington, D. C., is on the bank of the Potomac on the axis of the Capitol and the Washington Monument. It is of white marble, approximately 200 feet long, with columns 44 feet high and 7 feet 4 inches in diameter. The height of the building above the grade of the Potomac is 125 feet. The main feature of the Memorial is to be a colossal marble statue of Lincoln by Daniel C. French. On the end walls of the interior will be memorials of the Gettysburg Address and the Second Inaugural, with appropriate mural decorations above by Jules Guerin. Work on the Memorial was begun on February 12, 1914, the corner stone was laid February 12, 1915, and it will be dedicated within a few months. The architect is Henry Bacon of New York City.

WORDS OF LINCOLN.

This is a world of compensation.

I shall do nothing in malice. What I deal with is too vast for malicious dealings.

With public sentiment, nothing can fail; without it, nothing can succeed.

You will never get me to support a measure which I believe to be wrong, although by doing so I may accomplish that which I believe to be right.

Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, but let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS.

Delivered at the Dedication of the National Cemetery, November 19, 1863.

(As revised by Mr. Lincoln.)

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate — we cannot consecrate — we cannot hallow — this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us — that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion — that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain — that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom — and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Executive Mansion

Washington, Nov. 21, 1864.

To Mrs. Bixby, Boston, Mass.

Dear Madam.

I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

A. Lincoln.

LINCOLN'S HANDS IN BRONZE.

This most interesting picture is from McClure's Magazine of August, 1907, accompanying an article by Truman H. Bartlett, on "The Physiognomy of Lincoln." The bones are finely shaped, the muscles are thin and strongly defined, the finger nails are of good form. The casts were made a few days after Lincoln's nomination for the Presidency.
